Aaron's Books Community Education Series for 2010 "Living Healthy, Wealthy and Wise"

December 28, 2009 (Lititz PA)

Aaron's Books, Lancaster County's independent bookstore, is dedicated to increasing its community involvement in 2010, which includes organizing a new education series entitled "Living Healthy, Wealthy and Wise". Throughout the year, speakers will come to Aaron's Books to speak about important issues of interest to individuals in the Lititz and Lancaster communities.

Financial consultant Ryan Landgraff from accruWealth will begin the series on Tuesday, January 12 at 7pm, with a presentation about the basics of financial planning for families of all ages and income levels. As a financial representative, Ryan Landgraff, M.Ed, works with a team of peer professionals teaching clients to protect and enhance their assets, managing their own wealth while minimizing risk. This introductory session highlights key concepts everyone should understand: leverage, rate of return, liquidity, and turning liabilities into assets.

On Tuesday February 2 at 6pm, Dean Loux of Wells Fargo will speak about the different types of home mortgages and various aspects of refinancing and applying for new home loans. Other February speakers at Aaron's Books will include a family lawyer and a certified public accountant.

March and April speakers will present important information on personal health, including healthy eating, heart health, and holistic healing. During the summer, speakers will present various aspects of sustainable living.

"We want to be a resource for our community," said co-owner Todd Dickinson. "Our customers and neighbors have been so supportive of us, and we want to help bring information to them throughout the year that should prove useful."

Aaron's Books, a member of the American Booksellers Association, is the region's independent bookstore, family owned and operated since 2005.
